BLOWN TO ATOMS.

Four Men in the Cabin Instantly Killed.

NEW YORK, June 23. The steam tug Alice M. Crowe, lying at the pier at the foot of West Thirty-first st., South Brooklyn, yesterday morning blown into pieces by the explosion of her boiler and four of the five men asleep in her cabin were instantly killed.

The boat, which was considered a staunch one and most clean in every particular, was entirely wrecked, and but a few fragments have floated floating on the water. The force of the explosion was so great that it tore a hole in a barge which was being docked alongside of it. The barge went to the bottom. The body of Captain Squires was found upon the deck of a schooner lying in a neighboring dock, and the body of the steward was taken from the water some distance from the explosion. The two firemen, it is believed, went down with the wrecked hull. The engineer had a narrow escape. He was coming down the deck on the way to the tug when the explosion occurred.

WE AD FORTUM A CE.

A Witness of an Indian Cannibal Feast.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 22. A. K. Buchanan, of Victoria, B. C., now in this city, during a trip in British Columbia a few weeks ago, accidentally ran across a tribe of Indians in the midst of a cannibal feast. He says that around his lodge fifty fierce were about fifty savages, dressed and painted in the brightest colors. There were several naked dancers and about a dozen women beating accompaniments to their weird songs. Every little while the fire would flame up and fresh meat would be thrown upon the logs. Throw or four bodies were hooked and eaten while the party was there.

A WIND' COUNTRY.

A Small Town Nearly Wiped Out of Existence.

OMAHA, Neb., June 23. Pleasanton, a small town twenty miles north of Kearney was struck by a cyclone yesterday afternoon. Nearly every house in the place was destroyed or badly damaged, but no one was killed as far as reported, although several were burned.

ONTARIO.

Canada will Remove Duty on Sawed Logs.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 23. Sir John Macdonald states that if the McKinley bill is finally passed and if the duty on lumber is fixed at the figure as proposed in the amendment made last week, viz., $1.00 per 1,000 feet board measurement, the Canadian government will issue a proclamation entirely removing the duty on sawed logs.

DODGED THE QUESTION.

Of the Standing of ex-Parson Downs.

BOSTON, June 23. At a meeting of the Baptist Ministers Association to-day a committee was appointed to consider the status of Rev. W. W. Downs, ex-pastor of the Bowdoin Square church. It reported that his present status in the denomination was not the result of any action of this conference and recommended that the matter be dropped

OVERDRAWN ACCOUNTS

French Officer Explains the Situation of Affairs.

St. JOHNS, N. F., June 23. In an interview with the commander of the French war ship Indre regarding the accounts of the fashion which recently took place on the French shore that officer says:

"There is a germ of truth in them, but they are fearfully exaggerated and overdrawn. One of these accounts states that an armed crew landed, paroled the shore and took up the fishermen's nets. Only one officer went on shore for the purpose and he acted as quietly as possible. The first and principal right of fishing belongs to the French and it is perfectly within the province of French rights to order the removal of the nets at any British subjects that may interfere with them. As for the reports of any friction between my men and fishermen on the coast, I may say they are entirely untrue. The owners of the nets which I was forced to order to be removed took them up promptly. I believe that everything is amicable enough now. If people who know nothing about the actual facts of the case would not interfere there would be no trouble."

GREAT INCREASE.

Chicago's Population Doubled

Suicide from Despondency.

CONCORD, N. H., June 23. Fred. C. Thompson, who committed suicide on the banks of the Merrimack from despondency last night, was a native of this city and 21 years old. He was a son of the late Capt. James Thompson and was well known here. His friends believe that he committed the deed through despondency resulting from an injured brain and severe insomnia in Florida. He leaves a widow and one child.

NAVAL LEGISLATION.

Important Measures to be Acted Upon at this Session.

WASHINGTON, June 23. Chairman Boutelle and other members of the House Naval Committee are putting their best efforts forward to secure evening sessions for the consideration of naval bills. This is the only possible chance of getting any naval legislation, during this session, as the naval committee have been so backward in their work that few measures are advanced far enough to give reasonable hope for their final passage this session.

There is one important measure, however, that the Navy Department is more anxious to get through, and as it has already passed the Senate, the House will probably be realized if the committee succeeds in getting a day. This is the bill to increase the efficiency of the enlisted force of the navy by increasing the pay, providing a means of retirement for old sailors, increasing the number of naval apprentices, etc.

The necessity for prompt action in the measure is fully exemplified by the difficulty the department is now experiencing in manning men for the navy. Experienced sailors and apprentice boys, upon the completion of their first enlistment in 90 per cent., if not more cases, drift into the merchant marine service, where the pay is better and life more comfortable.

The foreign element is practically the only source left to draw upon at the present time, and until some legislation is had to better the condition of the American sailor it would be decidedly embarrassing, especially at this time, when new ships are coming into service, to cut off this undesirable, but necessary source of supply.

JUMPED THE TRACK.

Several Railroad Employes Injured on the Wreck.

READING, Pa., June 23. The locomotive, baggage car and one passenger car of the south bound express train on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad jumped the track this morning near Tuckerton station, five miles above the city. PENNY WISE BUT FOUND FOOLISH

Once a merchant, who had an eye single to great profits and regarded not the wants of his patrons, undertook to induce a customer to take some of Dunsbury's soap. "What you say may be all true," said the customer, "but my wife does not want that soap, and as you have not got Brussels soap I'll step in next door and get it," which he did. And ever after he traded at the place where could be found the economical Brussels soap, and other desirable household articles.

BREWER LOCALS.

Mayor Sargent is absent on a short business trip to Philadelphia.

The First Congregational Y. P. S. C. E., held services at the Alms House Sunday afternoon.

Bunker and Clapp's delivery horse appeared out in a handsome new harness, yesterday.

Mrs. Frank J. Cayling and her little son left yesterday for a visit with friends in Massachusetts.

Mr. Ayer has the frame of his new house in the rear of the Methodist church up and boarded and the roof shingled.

Dr. F. H. Nye, of West Brooksville, has returned home after a short visit to friends in this city, where he formerly resided.

The many friends of Mr. George B. Hoskins will be sorry to learn that he is confined to the house by a severe attack of pneumonia.

The flagging of the street crossings was distributed yesterday and the work of putting them in place will commence as soon as possible.

The schooner William Flint finished loading and sailed yesterday for New York with 425 tons of the J. P. Woodbury Ice Company's ice.

A crew of men are at work putting a two-inch pipe on Fling street, to carry water to the new tenement house of the Brewer Building Association.

The new bicycle hose cart for Deluge hose company arrived yesterday and is a beauty, the wheels standing just six feet and the whole thing tipping the scales at 225 pounds.

Mr. Fred E. Miller, who has been clerk for Mr. B. B. Martill, the druggist, during the absence of Mr. Wyman, has been secured by F. J. Tracy & Co., Bangor, and commenced the duties of his new position yesterday.

The Junior society of Christian Endeavor connected with the Congregational church, will hold a sociable in the vestry of the church this evening. A pleasant entertainment has been promised and the young folks will doubtless enjoy it.

Mrs. J. B. Farrington, of Portland, wife of Superintendent Farrington of the State Reform School, is visiting friends in Brewer for a few days. She will also attend commencement at the State College, one of her sons, of which she has two at college, being among the graduates.

A gentleman who was at or near the dish house at the salmon pool, reported that he saw a deer near the house yesterday morning. If sportsmen would enjoy the attractions of the Penobscot they should bring their guns with them, and while they almost catch fish from one side of the house, shoot deer from the other.

There was a runaway on Center street yesterday afternoon, but little damage was done. Harlow Brothers' horse was standing before their store when the wheel of the wagon to which he was attached became entangled with a load of lumber, which was passing, and this frightened the horse so that he jumped, clearing himself from the wagon, but was caught before running far.

Rents are very scarce in the city and there is a load call for rents of a good quality, which could be let as fast as ready for occupancy. A gentleman pointed to a sign on a house "for rent," yesterday, with the remark that it was the first sign of its kind he had seen in Brewer for a long time, there being no need of advertising the fact as people find it out before they are vacant.

The masons are at work on the rear wall of the foundation of the new house on Fling street and have it nearly completed. The main building, 200 feet long, will extend back into five ells, four of which will be divided into two tenements each and the fifth, at the end will form one apartment by itself. The excavating, except for the wall, will not be made until the rear and end walls are all up and the earth then taken out will go to grade in front of the building. About two feet will be taken out at the upper end, running up to five feet at the lower end.

STATE NEWS.

Unknown.

Mrs. Morgan, of Falmouth, lost in the road a blind bag containing $60 in money, last week. Later she found the bag without the money. A Portland detective afterwards arrested one Joseph Bates, who made confession of the theft and said he had already paid the money to a Mr. Chapman, of Falmouth, for a horse. The money will be recovered.

The firm of Nealon & Shields, at Green's Landing, have been getting out logs which they intend to raft down the Penobscot river to Bangor, when the greater part have grown to Green's Landing, the school were cut last winter. Now to find the logs, the firm have had men at work for the past week searching for them in the river and coves. The logs are marked with the letters "N. & S." and

The Bar Harbor Record, always on the lookout for the interests of Mt. Desert Island, raises a protesting voice this week against the signboards which up all over the island bearing the legend, "This lot is for sale." The Record thinks a new corner would easily get the idea from looking over the field, that lots were a drug in the market and so would hesitate to invest; when in fact many of the lots thus labelled are already sold and the purchaser has neglected to take down the boards. The city for Bar Harbor real estate owners to do is to discourage the use of these "tombstones," as one visitor to Bar Harbor called them, and put their advertisements in the newspapers.

Runaway.

A valuable horse belonging to Mr. B. Aldrich, of Augusta, became frightened last week, and backed over a bridgeway which gave way, letting the horse fall twelve feet and killing him.

A Diplomatic reception given this month by Minister John L. Stevens and wife, formerly of Augusta, at the U. S. Legation at Hawaii, Sandwich Islands, is described as a brilliant affair. The house was decorated both outside and in, with flags, vines and flowers. The band of the United States flagship Charlestown, stationed under Lieutenant Carter, played on the grounds alternately with the Royal Hawaiian Band. An elegant collation was spread. Among the callers were the King and Queen and heir apparent.

Cases.

The legal powers of a Rockland attorney were taxed, the other day, by a problem presented to him by two disputing young men who had been talked up to a horse trade. The story told by one of them was that the Rockland man with whom he swapped steeds, paid him $5 to boot and agreed to pay $10 more in 60 days, also to deliver as part of the difference a pig, a dog, four hens and a brood of chickens. It appears that their trade was made in the afternoon and that evening the man promised to have the promised pig and the jolly dog and the festive hens and chickens collected together for the young jockey to take away. On his calling for the promised family of quadrupeds and bipeds, the man would not deliver them but repudiated the horse trade and called for his own horse at the same time turning out the horse he had received. The young jockey could not at that time return the horse previously taken from the man, so he did not have it, having been with a friend who owned the team they had. The man gave evidence that he meant business by taking their horse from the carriage, putting it in his stable and locking it up. Afterwards, with the aid of an officer, the young man recovered the horse, declining to return to the man the horse he had traded, which promise they kept. The young jockey was allowed keep the money that had been paid him, but he vainly sought to obtain from his counsel any hope of ever being able to take legal possession of the promised pig, the jolly dog, the four festive hens and the brood of frolicsome chicks.

Business.

A prayer meeting in a town in Penobscot county, the other evening, came to a sudden and most unexpected close. The clergyman who led the meeting had left his horse hitched in a shed behind the church. In the midst of the services the animal broke his halter, backed out of the shed, overturned a carriage, spilling a five-gallon can of molasses on the ground and the side of the church, and started for home. His owner saw the performance and started after him without waiting to pronounce the benediction.

Pleasantries.

Somebody having recalled the "Indian scare" in the Picturesque valley, during the year of 1812, in a way that might lead one to believe that a war whoop was heard in Oldtown from which an attack was feared, the Pleasantries Observer comes to the defense of the good name of that peaceful and friendly tribe by explaining how matters stood. It was not the Tarratines from whom protection was asked of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, of which Maine was then a part, but the Mohawks, a hostile tribe which lived in Canada.

Summer.

It is said that the cost of a theatre ticket in Bath, is higher than in other Maine cities. Decoration Bath is spared many malicious by-words of the kind.

The activities of the season at Popham Beach will be opened by the Knights Templar on June 26. This will be the first of many such pilgrimages in Maine, this summer.

Summer.

The Friends of S. Frank Ward, late of Stockbridge, received by telegraph the intelligence of his death in St. Paul, Minn., where he had been living the past two years. He left a wife and one child. His age was about forty-nine years. Mr. Ward was in Company F, Twentieth Maine Regiment, and lost a leg at Gettysburg.

A block from excavating for the Monson block on Water street, Skowhegan, did much damage, recently. Several teams and a large number of persons were passing at the time of the explosion, but no one was hurt. The plate glass fronts of Randall Brothers, and R. B. Merrill & Son were badly smashed, with more or less crockery inside. The damage is about $250. Fragments of rock were thrown into the street and against the stores on the opposite side.

Water.

Terry & Whitehouse are busy shipping ice from their smallest houses at Udly. Three hundred tons goes over the road to Belfast daily. It comes from the house in fine condition and with very little waste. They work a crew of thirty men and are loading their second vessel.

A.I Sorts and Sizes.

Porter F. Crab is the name of an Indian baby named by the census enumerator for Superintendent Porter.

Robert Bonner was treated to a genuine surprise, Wednesday. Sunol did a quarter in 31 1-5 seconds, or at the rate of 2:04-44 for the mile, at Terre Haute, Ind.

Since it became a law in England, that all dogs should be muzzled, the number of cases of rabies has fallen from eighty-one, the last quarter of 1889, to thirty-one in the first quarter of this year.

James Millward, lately elected Mayor of Yonkers, N.Y., while adjutant of General Cassius M. Clay's command at Washington, in 1861, was stopped twelve times while he was on his way to New York via Baltimore, with despatches for General Patterson from President Lincoln, but he succeeded in delivering the papers.

Wolcott Holbertson, of New York, has completed a book that consists of a single copy that will never be duplicated. It is one of 101 quarto pages of imitation parchment, with every word so illustrated of the story of the author's experiences with rod and gun on lake and in field and camp, done with his pen or brush. It was prepared by Mr. Holbertson for his children.

There are two hundred and eight clubs in the city of New York, and very few have less than two hundred names on their rolls. Some are purely social, while others mix politics or religion or literature or athletics with sociability. Some of them own great buildings and maintain expensive clubhouses. Nearly every decent man in New York is a member of a club.

The musical world of Vienna, according to Dalziel, was treated to a practical exposition the other night, which is the Rubinstein

A fir tree recently cut in Whatcom county, Wash., was 300 feet high and 44 feet in circumference. It was seventy feet to the first limb, and at that point was ten feet through.

A brutal German Sub-Lieutenant stood sword in hand over a private soldier and compelled him to keep his hand in boiling water over a fire, under the pretence that it was the doctor's order to remove a concretion. The hand was ruined and the man crippled for life. He has been invalided and gives a pension of $6.55 a month. The inhuman officer was sent to prison for two months.

Mrs. Martha Gray, of Virginia, has been found by the census man. Mrs. Gray is now living with her third husband, and her record at rearing children is thus scheduled: Six trip out, 18; 6 twins, 12; 7 singles 7; total 37 children. When the census enumerator fearlessly remarked "Tally one for Mrs. Gray," the good lady exclaimed: "You tally 37, and don't you forget it!"

A four-in-hand coach race lately took place from Vienna to Pressburg. The participants were among the elite of Austrian aristocracy. Count Wimpfen's team was the winner, covering the distance in three hours. The first prize was 1,000 golden and a gold medal; a gold medal was the second prize. Vienna and Pressburg society turned out almost en masse to see the race, and the roads between the two cities were thronged with sight-seers.

Q. J. Collins, Brooklyn's new postmaster, is fifty-one. At the beginning of the war he was as a private with the Twelfth regiment. He was soon transferred to the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh New York Volunteers, in which he served as sergeant-major, adjutant and first lieutenant. He represented the 21st ward in the board of aldermen in 1883 and 1884, and he frequently served as a delegate to the general committee. He had been for several years in the black book and bookbinding business in Fulton lane, and is reported to be wealthy. He is a prominent Grand Army man, and was one of the organizers of U. S. Grant Post, 327, of which he is now commander.

A story is told of a meeting of judges in London prior to some occasion of state and of their deliberations over an address to be presented to the Queen. The writer of the first draft read it to his associates. It began with, "We are all aware of our imperfections." This was severely criticised, more than one of the big wigs asserting that he was not aware that he had any imperfections. Others concurred in this with respect to themselves, and the discussion grew more vigorous, the became sedate judges until it was suggested that the sentence be amended to read "We are all aware of each others' imperfections." Then there was a laugh, the rough draft was laid aside, and they made a fresh start.

The news that Ward McAllister has decided to stay for the early part of the season at Coney Island causes an incredulous smile among most old New Yorkers. To them, says the Sun, the Coney Island of to-day is inextricably mixed up with the Coney Island of sixty years—the trotters, roughest, roughest spot on earth. It was a place for clam bakes, shooting crabs, shoulder hammisions and three card monte men. The impression which that got of it is one that they can never shake off. Coney Island is synonymous with cheap and gaudy splendor and the omnipotence of the rough. It seems grotesque that the arbiter of New York society should take up his residence there. It is said of Coney Island on which Mr. McAllister will dwell in an exclusive almost as Newport, and as different from the Coney Island of old as day is night.

SOUTELLE & BUER, PROPRIETORS.

G. A. BOARDMAN, EDITOR.

All business letters should be addressed to Soutelle & Buer, and communications intended for publication should be addressed "Editor of Whig and Courier."

TUESDAY, JUNE 24, 1890.

For Governor,

HOWARD C. BOARDMAN.

The promptness with which the Democratic papers have seized to glean over the alleged discontentment of Speaker Reed is truly astonishing. It seems to be Mr. Reed's fate to laugh now, as his course has been handsomely vindicated by the House.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat should send its exchanges more thoroughly. It says in discussing the Sherman election bill: "Such federal interference with the elections will have a bad result, that it will create disturbance and leave the Harrison administration with an evil reputation to substantial by all."

Mr. Blaine, the Democratic Senator in Mr. Cockrell's place, has resigned, and is elected by only a few hundred plurality. Mr. Blaine's opinion, contingent upon the "most consistent Republicans?" Well, a little consistent Mr. Cockrell's majority would have been in his position.

The Boston Journal says: One by one the party stand up among the Democrats of Maine are temporarily but fairly defeating, to be the Democratic candidate for Governor. One prominent Maine Democrat remarks, however, to be consulted. It is Reed, the Maine dodge, when the original package decision has finally "shelved." He is one of the shining lights of the Democracy of Maine. Why not give him the nomination?

The complaint in Congress the only good package decision relegated all State laws, whether prohibitory or not, to oblivion, but they will be blotted out by the pending Congressional legislation. The Senate bill has been before the House Committee, and Mr. Reed's bill intended to substantially agree with the bill prepared by the Senate Judiciary Committee has been favorably reported and is now on the House calendar. The matter will doubtless come to fruition long and the day of original packages will come.

The Concord say the Democratic State Committee has "decided" to call the attention to a majority of the House members, and expects to establish the fact that they will get every vote in the minority. This indicates that our Democratic friends will be very strong in their views. The intention on the part of the minority leaders of the Democratic party is to make a strong effort to secure the election of the Democratic party in Congress. In the last Congress, the Democrats, under the adroit leadership of Speaker Reed, were able to carry the Republicans, who opposed a bill passed which were backed down by the leadership, who refused to give them a fair hearing, but they got them all the same when the vote was taken.

The Boston news is to have continued in the text that the majority being required by the legislature the majority would be required to elect the Speaker will of the majority. The bill comes from Washington that the Reed bill will pass the House and be made applicable to the forthcoming Congressional elections. If the Democrats shall succeed in defeating the bill, and to defeat it all may the Congress and elections, the Republicans will find a way to end the bill. Thoughtful people have made the observing to place in effect that from the beginning, "there will have been only obliged. Such action will leave the opposition of the people of the country just as the case of the Blaine-Democrats opposed.

The Bangor Daily Commercial says: Our friend Mr. Boardman, the Republican candidate for Governor, has been nominated by a total vote of 319, leaving only eight members unplaced on the division. The vote comprised 158 Republicans and fourteen Democrats. The city column was composed of 16 Republicans and 138 Democrats. The Republicans gave a party majority of 140 against free coinage, while the Democrats gave a party majority of 133 in support of Mr. Blaine's appeal.—Boston Herald.

The above figures are attractive as they afford striking evidence of the standing of the two parties on the question of a sound currency. The people will be apt to remember this fact in the coming elections this fall. The free coinage bill in the Senate was passed by a majority of the Democratic and a minority of the Republicans.

The Augusta (Iowa) Bugle recently made an excellent showing of the tremendous hypocrisy of certain free traders who profess great solicitude for "the poor farmer" should be extended to the great of "the great manufacturer." The same "champion" pointed out by the Bugle in the Minnesota Mr. Stark, of Owatonna, who leaves it the author of a bill for an alleged relief of the farmer. Mr. Stark's bill was devised to cripple Northern manufacturers and to enable the Southern planting aristocracy to buy "cheap clothing" for the "cheap labor" of which they boast so much. When Mr. Stark was advocating the passage of his bill he was eloquent in urging Northern farmers to protest against "the usurpation of manufacturing capital." His bill, however, was rejected by Congress, and the action of Congress was approved by the vote of the people. Mr. McKinley having introduced a bill which gives greater protection to the farmers of this country, the Democratic press has for the most part, been busy in attacking "the poor farmer" that the bill would not protect them. But Mr. Stark lives in Minnesota. He votes as a citizen in the State of the greatest manufacturing "trusts" in the New England "trust manufacturers" to "unite their whole political power to defeat national relief." Just as in 1888 he had urged the farmers to unite their whole political power to defeat "national slavery." He declared that the McKinley bill "increases the duties on all farm products, a great part of which New Hampshire buy from other nations." So that Mr. Stark, of Texas, had now is an enthusiast the author of a bill for the relief of the farmer.

silver coinage requiring the Speaker for his reference of the silver bill, was warmly opposed by Mr. Burrows, of Michigan. He read from the Congressional Record of the proceedings of the last House, when the Senate substitute for the Bland bill was laid before the House under similar circumstances. An attempt was made at that time to have the bill taken up at once without reference to any committee. Mr. Reed insisted that the bill would have to be referred, under the rules, to the Committee on Ways and Means before it could be considered by the House. Mr. Hendrick and the other Democratic leaders made the same claim and Speaker Carlisle ruled that the bill would have to be referred. It is not strange that Speaker Carlisle ruled to keep his friends and support in the House from doing like the pit dog by Mills. He was successful, however.

Discussion on the Agricultural College Bill.

The Senate Agrees to the Conference Report on the Dependent Pension Bill.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, June 23. The Senate resumed consideration of the agricultural college aid bill.

Mr. Morrill offered a substitute for various amendments pending Saturday as to the division of the fund between colored and white schools of a State.

Mr. Pugh, who offered the first amendment on that point, said Mr. Morrill's amendment covered all points he was aiming at and withdrew his own amendment. He hoped Mr. Morrill's would be accepted.

Messrs. Hale, Chandler and Gibson also withdrew amendments.

Mr Morrill's amendment was adopted.

It provides that in any State in which there has been one agricultural college established under the act of 1862 and in which there is or may be an educational institution of like character for colored students, aided by the State from its own revenue, however named or styled, there shall be just and equitable division of the fund received under the act, made by the Legislature.

Mr. Blair made a remark to the effect that it was from the Southern Senator (Mr. Pugh) that the proposition came to give the colored scholars a share of the fund and no Northern man thought of it.

Mr. Hawley resented the remark and said the bill originally contained a provision that no money should be paid where distinction is raised on color, but the establishment and maintenance of separate colleges for white and colored students would be in compliance with the act.

Mr. Ingalls also resented Mr. Blair's remarks. He said that the proposition to disburse the fund among white and colored schools could not with propriety come from a Northern Senator. His instincts and convictions were against it.

The necessity could arise only in a Southern State. The Senator from Alabama had logically offered his amendment to adapt the bill to the condition of things which existed in the South and he (Ingalls) cordially gave his assistance to it.

Mr. Hawley said he would have but one agricultural college in one State and it would be for every person whom the Lord made fit to go into school, but he yielded to this other proposition because it seemed the best on the whole.

Some formal amendments were made to the bill and it then passed.

The conference report on the Dependent Pension bill was taken up.

Mr. Berry made a speech against it. The practical effect of it would be, he said, to put 90 per cent of the Union soldiers on the pension rolls. It was really a service pension bill.

Mr. Gorman also opposed the conference report. He believed it was concensus opinion that those soldiers unable to provide for themselves, their wives and dependent children, ought to be provided for. But there had to be a limit to pension appropriations. There had been paid in pensions, since 1861, $1,105,326,000, a sum sufficient if the pension bureau had been properly administered and the law properly framed to provide amply and well for all who served the country. The pension expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, were $109,000,000, without taking into account the expenses of the pension bureau. The rate at which the pension list had increased under the existing law, might safely be estimated at $10,000,000 a year.

Mr. Davis, Chairman of the Committee on Pensions discussed the figures put forward, and defied their correctness. His own estimate was 300,000 survivors of the war not now on the pension list, who were suffering from such disability as the pending law provided for and that, taking $9 a month as the average pension, the annual cost of pensioning these men would be $32,400,000.

When the discussion closed the conference report was agreed to—yeas 34, nays 18.

After a short executive session the Senate at 5 adjourned.

House.

The Speaker announced the appointment of Messrs. Brewer, Butterworth and Sayers as conferees on the Fortification bill.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on District business.

The Atkinson bill, amendatory of the act authorizing the construction of the Baltimore & Potomac railroad, in the District of Columbia, was taken up. For nearly four hours the bill was debated and at 5 the committee rose without final action.

Mr. Morrow, of California, reported the inability of the conferees on the general Pension Appropriation bill to agree and at his instance the House insisted upon its disagreement to the Senate amendments.

The House at 5.05 adjourned.

President Hayes gave McCrary a portfolio, which he held two years. He resigned to accept a Judgeship in the United States Court, to which he was appointed in December, 1879. In March, 1884, he resigned the Judgeship and removed from Keokuk to Kansas City, where he became general consulting attorney for the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad Company, a position he occupied at the time of his death.

A frisky horse became frightened on Kenduskeag bridge yesterday forenoon and leaping upon the sidewalk he began to run. The only obstacle which he met was a pile of empty boxes and these he went over like a bird. The boxes were scattered in every direction. The animal was stopped after going a short distance further and strange to say not the least damage was done.

A party of commercial travelers enjoyed a pleasant trip yesterday to one of the numerous ponds quite near the city. They were rewarded by a catch of sixty pounds of large sized bass, after some exciting sport, which was fully enjoyed by the fishermen. Some of our ponds and lakes have a bountiful supply of bass and it is a rare thing when the fishermen are not plentifully rewarded for their exertions.

Sunday afternoon as some young ladies from this city were riding through the grounds at Mount Hope they observed a young lad of some twelve years busily engaged in arranging several bouquets of flowers in a family lot. After completing his task, which was done with much precision and taste, he remounted his bicycle and returned to the city. This thoughtfulness in one so young is certainly commendable.

A despatch has been received in this city announcing the death in Denver, Col., Sunday morning of Mrs. Edward Heffron, formerly of this city, and sister of Mr. Cornelius O'Brien. Mrs. Heffron's death was owing to a terrible burning which she received by the explosion of a kerosene lamp in the house in which she lived. She formerly resided in this city and the sad news will be a shock to her many friends in Bangor and elsewhere.

The Chautauqua Assembly will begin July 28th at Fryeburg, and continue in session two weeks. The programme is exceptionally fine and there is every indication of a very large and successful assembly. Rooms and cottages are in demand this year and those who do not wish to be disappointed will do well to engage their accommodations at once. Quite a number from the city will attend the assembly this year, as has been customary in years past.

Mr. J. W. Withee, of the "Islesborough," Sabbath Day Harbor, was in the city yesterday. He informs us that the season has opened very auspiciously, a number of rooms being engaged and several guests already being registered at the hotel. The house, under Mr. Withee's management, is going to sustain the excellent reputation of a first-class table which it had last year, and an important feature of the season will be the Saturday night hops, an orchestra having been engaged for the season.

A HANDSOME SWORD. In the window of the store of Mr. James A. Robinson is on exhibition the sword which was presented to Capt. L. S. Chilcott by the Chilcochinas as a token of their appreciation of his services in drilling them. It is a very handsome piece of work. On one side of the blade is the inscription: "Presented to Captain L. S. Chilcott by the Chilcochinas, May 23d, 1890," and on the other side is the United States coat of arms. The scabbard is of silver, with metal grip, finely wrought and decorated. The rings are held by eagles. The sword is one of the finest and costliest ever seen in this city and it is admired by all who see it. Capt. Chilcott prizes it very highly.

THE POINT PINE CLUB. The members of the Point Pine Club have begun to make use of their club house and grounds and enjoy their privileges there. They have already had several trips to the Point, which have been very pleasant affairs. The house is to be enlarged this year and improvements will be made about the grounds which will put them in the best of condition. There is a good base ball field at the Point, on the club's land, and it is frequently used by the ambitious devotees of the sport. The members are planning for several trips to the Point this summer with their lady friends, and these will be interesting and enjoyable occasions.

Captured a Live Deer.

Messrs. W. S. Carr and J. E. Doherty, of this city, with two Old Town men have been on a fishing trip to Moosehead Lake. While there they had a peculiar experience with a deer. They discovered a deer in the water near their camp, and immediately put out in a boat or canoe to capture the creature alive. The y succeeded in doing and conveyed their prize to shore and confined it in an old hut. During the night the deer escaped and the next morning was seen again in the water, where the party recaptured it. This time the animal was put in safe quarters and was brought to this city, and it was on exhibition yesterday at Carr's market.

A staging has been built about the steeple of St. John's Catholic church and the workmen will repair some of the arches, which, it is feared, may be started from their positions and need attention.

Fire Last Night.

Shortly before midnight an alarm from box 34 brought out the fire department. The fire proved to be in the meat market of McKoy & Kelley at the junction of Hammond and Union streets, owned by Andrew Kelley. A dense smoke poured from the building but the flames were principally confined to the cellar and first floor. After working a short time the fire was extinguished and the firemen departed. The fire was discovered by an occupant of one of the rooms above, who gave the alarm. Appearances indicated that fire was of incendiary origin. The damage will not be large. The building is an old one. Several members of the Uniformed Rank, K. of P., who were returning from drill, rendered good service in getting the Holly hose cart to the scene and it is said each one of them showed distinction by his bravery. With great thoughtfulness he left his two or three companions to hold the nozzle through the pane and now rushed to the house where his anxious mamma was

The Bowdoins Say They were Cheated Out of the Race by a Mean Trick.

A madder, more indignant lot of fellows probably never struck Brunswick than the eight members of the Bowdoin crew who returned from Ithaca on Friday night's Pullman, says the Argus. They were indignant because they were conscious of having been defeated by one of the dirtiest tricks ever resorted to by any college team or crew. They went to Ithaca with the expectation of rowing a gentlemanly race and being treated in a gentlemanly way by the Ithaca reporters and the Cornell crew. On the other hand, they claim that they have been submitted to the most barefaced lies by the press and the most unmanly treatment by the home crew.

In the first place, the Cornell reporters gave in an almost universal report of a four or five lengths lead at the finish. But with a ludicrous inconsistency they at the same time published, in accordance with the official time, that the difference in time was just nine seconds. Now if the Bowdoin College crew, or any other crew—American or English—that ever sat in a shell, is capable of covering four boat lengths, or, in other words, 240 feet, in nine seconds, it certainly would hand down a record that would keep humanity humping for several millenium, to say the least. All the Maine men who were present, say that there was not more than 1¼ lengths of clear water between the shells at the finish.

The time of the Bowdoin crew on the day of the race was over 17 minutes. On one occasion previous they had covered the course in 16 minutes and 4 seconds, and on another, when the water was scarcely less rough than on the day of the race, they had covered it in 16 minutes and 30 seconds. Now, what made the difference? It was plainly due to the fact that they were kept waiting two hours in a cold north wind, in the middle of the lake, cramped up in their boat and with no clothing on save light rowing tights, about the thickness of an ordinary summer undershirt. The Cornell referee came to them the day before the race and made the request that, as a special favor, they would be prompt at the start, so as not to keep the Cornell crew waiting, who rowed barehack. This the Bowdoin men promised, and were true to their word. The referee whistled repeatedly and sent word several times for the crew, and it was only after nearly two hours that they made their appearance, rowing the slowest possible pace to kill time. When the word was given to start every man on the Bowdoin crew was chilled through, with teeth chattering. They all say that it was impossible for them to pull their usual stroke for the first 1½ miles.

There is no surer index of opinion than a man's wallet. "Money talks." When Bowdoin first arrived, betting was 5 to 1 in favor of Cornell, but before the day of the race the original betters had all resorted to "hedging," and, despite the reports to the contrary, betting was running even, with many giving odds on Bowdoin. Coacher Plaisted says he will bet $500 Bowdoin can beat Cornell three lengths in a fair race. It was a mean affair and the Bowdoin students are prouder than ever of the magnificent crew that made so good a fight against every odds.

CHARLOTTE CORDAY.—A NEW HISTORY OF CHARLOTTE, AT A NEW AN... LAST LIFTED IN THE PERIOD.

(Wash. Cor. Boston Journal.)

The Corcoran Art Gallery the magnificent gift of the millionaire philanthropist, the late W. W. Corcoran, to the city of Washington, had recently attempted the experiment of giving night exhibitions by the aid of the electric light. The success has been much greater than was expected. The Trustees have carried out their original design in making these evening exhibitions educational. They have been recently some important additions to this gallery, and among them are many works of recognized merit. One of the new works in the gallery which attracts attention, as well from the novelty of the conception as from the skill in execution, is the portrait of Charlotte Corday, by a new artist. Visitors to galleries and lovers of pictures have seen the portrait of Charlotte Corday in many forms. But these forms have all retained one type—that of impressionable woman improved by her inspiring fate. It has been left for a new artist of this city, Louis E. Spinner, to form an original and new conception of this historically "beautiful daughter of Normandy," who gave to the Revolution, Marat, his book of blood. The artist has depicted Charlotte Corday as in prison, writing a letter to her aged father on the eve of the execution. While the prison-stained executioner indeed stands behind her to allow her one minute more to finish the letter. He expects the moment, indeed, to arrive, when he will have to lay his hand upon her to carry her to the guillotine. The artist has chosen not to show the moment of death, but the moment of expectation, but all expression of weakness, trembling, and of a woman's fear of death, has been left out. The face and form are perfectly composed. It was intended to be a lovely creature. It was intended to contrast the innocence, when she had known it her mind, and upon whom she had fallen, to defend her. The letter was as follows:

"Forgiveness of Lamoignon is a boon for having refused to defend me when the time was to come. He who did so acquit himself with all possible dignity. He shall have my gratitude to the last moment."

The story of Charlotte Corday is always deeply interesting. Grim, gaunt, Madame Guillotine, but less severe than the executioner himself, by young Spinner, gives the mask of her.

She is of nearly Norman descent in her twenty-third year, of beautiful form and features, has come to Charlotte Corday, accompanied by her friend Barbaroux, who is certainly still true. Barbaroux has given her a note to Doyen Duperret—him who once drew his sword in the convention. A conversation, a decision in of this fair female spirit, by society she doubts its spirit and will yourself you to perform the part for her country. And of the trial scene in the convent.

"On Wednesday morning the tocsin rang in Caen and Revolution of Tribunal can see her face, beautiful and calm; she dates it from the day of the proscription of people. A strange interest has through the city. Hundreds of hard, rough men, of Charlotte Corday. Hundreds have filled the public hall, all these details are matchless, interested Charlotte. As is the billet, Barbaroux, by which recognized? It is so, quite. What lessons you have! Ah! I pulled one day, I pulled, pulling her voice composed, determined, as they, was with their shoulders. I think I can see in such a battle moment; a value to save thousands of people with a soft, sweet, tender, tender, I have, I believe, nothing to be ill. The end of her proscription, their house alone. The death of death or a tumultuous. To the advocate, the place, the people. To the judge they said, for she gives thanks, but needs not any showing. My country is safe all good time."

To friends which does and grows so much gave her mother kisses, with every of the Revolutionary girl is told by her tender and affectionate character of that time in these words.

Charlotte Corday demands from a notary friends of Barbaroux, introduction to the republic of the Revolutionary Marat, who lived in the guillotine all crystals to him.

Charlotte left her room, dressed more carefully than usual in white, the blue in contrast, in a responsible adjustment that notes behind Marat. She walks slowly with a white dress, which was worn with her bosom. With the broad green, the green, with a broad green, the green, her hair half brought up in her good in the back, the hair, the hair, the hair
